PREFACE.

On a former occasion allusion was made to an order of the General Assembly directing sentence of excommunication to be pronounced on Archibald Hegate for his complicity in certain proceedings connected with the appointment of Robert Montgomerie to the archbishopric of Glasgow.[1] If that sentence was carried into effect, it must have been recalled as, a few years afterwards, Hegate passed through a similar ordeal. This was in the year 1588, at which time the country was in an agitated condition on account of the threatened Spanish invasion. Efforts were being made, through the medium of disaffected nobles, and by the aid of itinerant Jesuits and seminary priests, to set Scotland in opposition to England in this emergency; but these attempts proved ineffectual, and a proclamation was issued ordering the Roman Catholic and Spanish emissaries to leave the country, while those persons who received them, or gave them supplies, were subjected to penalties. It was for an infringement of this proclamation that misfortune overtook the clerk. In a list of "receavers of Jesuits" submitted to the General Assembly of the Kirk, in February, 1587-8, there occurs the name of "Archibald Hegat, clerk of Glasgow";[2] and the sequel—excommunication and deprivation of office—is ascertained from another source. The council record for that period is not extant, but the act of admission of John Ros as a notary, printed in Appendix I., narrates the facts. Hegate seems to have come to an arrangement with the ecclesiastical authorities about a year afterwards, but the truce did not last long. An act of the presbytery of Glasgow "contrair Archibald Hegate, burges of Glasgw, inter-communer with Papistis," dated 23 November, 1592, records that "the said Archibald is fund to have brokin his obligatioun insert in thair buikis of the dait" 6 July, 1589; and all ministers within the presbytery were therefore directed "to proceid summarlie in thair kirkis be the sentence of excommunicatioun, the nixt Sonday, oppinlie furth of pulpet, aganis the said Archibald Hegat for violatioune of his obligatioun, and thairby decernit ane perjured persone and ane renegate."[3]

Unless there is a mistake in the identity, it appears from the privy council register that the ex-clerk suffered persecution in another form. On 10 February, 1590-1, "Archibald Hiegatt, son and apparent heir of Williame Hiegatt, burgess of Glasgu," complained that, upon 11 September preceding, he had been "maist cruellie invadit and persewit of his lyfe be sum of his unfreindis, and hurte and woundit in divers pairtis of his body, and be thame left for deid." His assailants fled to Ferme, near Rutherglen, and "thai wer ressavit with the bludie hand be James Craufurde of Ferme, and intertenyt within his place." On learning that the complainer was not slain, Crawfurd and his servants, armed with pistols, attempted to attack him in his own house, but were repulsed; and now, through fear of threatenings against his life, the "complenair dar nocht repair furth of his awne hous eftir the falling of the nicht without he be armed and accompanyed with his freindis." Crawfurd having disobeyed the charge to appear before the privy council was denounced rebel.[1] The privy council had also to listen to accusations and recriminations between Hegate and his successor. On 26 February, 1590-1, security was given by John Lindsay of Dunrod "for Mr. Johnne Ros, town clerk of Glasgu, and David Robiesoun, his servant, that they will not harm Archibald Hiegait [and four others] burgesses of Glasgu";[2] and on the 13th of the following month, John Graham of Knokdoleane became surety "for Archibald Hiegait, son of William Hiegait, burgess of Glasgu, that he will not harm James Lyoun, Mr. Johnne Ros, or Mathew Colhoun, burgesses of Glasgu."[3]

The "extract of certane authoriteis and notabill placis of Scripture, collectit for my comfort in the tyme of my trubill"[4] was probably compiled by Hegate during this period of reverse. Restitution of the clerkship was in store for him, but this did not happen till about the year 1604, during the provostship of Sir George Elphinstone, who, as the printed abstracts show, had frequently employed him in his own affairs. It will be observed that of Hegate's protocols, from May, 1588, onwards, only a few relate to burgage properties, such protocols falling almost exclusively within the province of the town clerk for the time.

John Ros, a native of Glasgow, was elected as Hegate's successor before he was a notary; and his admission as such was expedited because it was a necessary qualification for the clerkship.[5] Appointed clerk, apparently about the middle of 1588, he was re-elected for a year in May, 1589, and again, for the like period, in June, 1590; and he must thus have held office for nearly three years. On his admission as a notary, he was supplied with a book, containing two hundred and forty leaves, for the engrossment of his protocols. Unfortunately, this book has not been written up beyond the forty-eighth leaf, and for the period of his clerkship subsequent to 3 July, 1589, no protocols have been inserted. During that time the usual transactions pertaining to the office must have been going on, and the instruments of sasine, or other notarial writs, would, doubtless, be prepared and delivered to those concerned, but the record kept by the notary probably took no more formal shape than jottings in his minute book which has not been preserved. The nature of the particulars entered in a notary's minute book is indicated in protocol No. 3205.

Another substantial loss to local history has been occasioned by the disappearance of one or more volumes of Henry Gibsone's protocols. Gibsone, a town clerk whose protocols, between 1555 and 1576, have already been printed in abstract, seems to have been re-appointed about the year 1591;[1] but, with the exception of one leaf of a lost book,[2] his protocols between 10 August, 1576, and 28 April, 1598, are not now extant.

Embracing the period during which the hiatus 1589-98 occurs, there is the first protocol book of George Huchesone, writer and notary public in Glasgow, and well known as the original founder of Huchesones' Hospital. As shown by the documents relating to his admission as a notary,[3] George Huchesone, though the son of a Glasgow citizen, began his professional career in Edinburgh, where he at first intended to continue; but he early returned to his native city and settled there. So far as is known, he did not at any time hold the clerkship, but some of his protocols refer to Glasgow properties, and most of them possess the local interest which justifies their being included in this series. The book extends from 1586-7 to 19 December, 1605, and abstracts will be given down to the end of 1600.

[1] At the beginning of Archibald Hegate's third protocol book there are two leaves which had originally been left blank, but on which, according to the usual custom, various jottings have been subsequently inscribed. On the first leaf there is this cautiously worded pledge, but whether written by the notary or not, is uncertain:—"xxj of Augusti, promist to forbeir wyne for ane yeir, except it be for lyfe or deth." On the second leaf there are a few pious expressions, one of them being a quotation from Scripture: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdome." "Blessit be the Lord in all His giftis." "Amen, finis." "Blessit be God for all His gifts." "God give my hand grace to speid." The notary's name is written here and there in three different forms,—"Hegaite, Heygait, and Heygaite," and there are some other names and disconnected words. The following couplet has several repetitions:—

"In to guid hoip my tyme I hyd, Quhill efterward that God provyd."

3100. LYOUN. 1 March, 1587-8, 8 a.m.

Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie, gave to Jonet Lyoun, daughter, and one of the three heirs-portioners of q. Archibald Lyoun, citizen, sasine of (1) a yard, with the pertinents, called Ranaldis Yard,[2] lying t.c., between the lands sometime of Sir William Herbertsoun, then belonging to William Hervie, gardener (hortulano), citizen, on the west,[3] the common vennel or passage of Densyde on the east, and the lands of q. Thomas Lard on the north;[4] (2) an annualrent of £4, payable furth of a tenement, lying t.c., in the wynd of the Minor Friars Preachers, belonging to Blase Barrie, citizen; (3) a fore

[1] Erskine, referring to an enactment contained in Regiam Majestatem, remarks that "our most ancient law, from a jealousy of the weakness of mankind while under sickness, and of the importunity of friends in that conjuncture, has declared that all deeds affecting heritage, if they be granted to the prejudice of the heir by a person upon deathbed, i.e., after contracting that sickness which ends in death, are ineffectual, unless where the debts due by the granter have laid him under a necessity to alienate his lands" (Institute, B. III., tit. viii., s. 95). A similar provision is contained in the old Burgh Laws (Leges Burgorum, c. 101) making it incompetent for a burgess to alienate his heritable property when on deathbed unless constrained to do so through necessity. The old law remained in force till 1871, when it was practically abrogated by the Act 34 and 35 Vict. c. 81.

[2] "Rannaldis Yard" is called in modern title deeds "Ronald and Douglas Yard," and its site includes properties north of George Street, west side of Deanside Lane, both sides of Portland Street, and south side of Richmond Street. In protocol No. 241, Archibald Lyoun's property is called Deynesyde Yairde, and therefore it was probably distinct from though adjoining Ranaldis Yard.

[3] Sir William Herbertsoun possessed this land as prebendary of the prebend of St. Anne in the church of Paisley. Among the Glasgow writs in the town clerk's office there is preserved a charter whereby Sir William, as prebendary and for behoof of himself and his successors, with consent of Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, proprietor of the lands of Cardonald, and holding the right of patronage to the prebend, granted in feu-farm to George Huchesone, writer, "that yard called Ronnaldis Yaird, and the small house or ludge built thereon, and the pertinents, then occupied by William Hervie, lying t.c., between the yard of q. Archibald Lyoun on the east, the yard of William Wylie, writer, on the south, the lands of the laird of Coleintoun [i.e., James Fowlis of Colingtoun; see Reg. Mag. Sig. v. No. 465] called Rameshorne on the west, and the lands called Deynside Crofte on the north." The prebendary for the time was to be paid 26s. 8d. yearly, in name of annualrent feu-farm, and heirs were liable in a duplicand the first year of their entry. The charter was subscribed by Herbertsoun at Edinburgh on 18th, and by the commendator (subscribing "Blantyre") at Blantyre Craig on 22nd November, 1588, and was confirmed by crown charter dated 1st January, 1589-90 (Ib. No. 1718; Glasg. chart. pt. i., abstract p. 33, No. 387).

[4] Thomas Lard acquired this land, consisting of an acre in Deanside Croft, as mentioned in protocol No. 1438. See also No. 1417.

tenement, under and above, sometime belonging to Sir Martin Reid, chaplain, lying on the south side of the street called the Gallogait, between the lands of Sir David Mayne on the west, and the new great tenement of the said q. Archibald Lyoun on the east; (4) a nether house, lying in the back close of the said house or fore tenement, then occupied by Robert M'Ildowny, merchant, citizen; (5) an annualrent of 26 s. 8 d., payable furth of a tenement belonging to John Bartoun, shoemaker, citizen, lying in the Bridgegait; (6) an annualrent of 40 s., payable furth of a tenement in the Bridgegait, belonging to James Dunlop alias Tailzeour, merchant, citizen; all conform to the decreet mentioned in No. 3094. Witnesses: George Lyoun, merchant, citizen, Mr. James Heygait, brother of the notary, Mathew Hercot, servant of the notary, James Andirsoun and Andrew Farie, serjeants. Arch. Hegate. Vol. iii. fol. 44.

3101. Brwme; Andirsoun—Andro, spouses. 6 March, 1587-8, 4 p.m.

Jonet Ersking, relict of q. John Brwme, flesher, citizen, sold to Robert Brwme, flesher, citizen, a half acre of land, lying t.c., in the muir called the Gallowmure, between the lands sometime of John Scot, then of John Andirsoun, on the west and east, the public lone on the south, and the lands of Craigis on the north. Sasine given by Robert Rowat, bailie. Thereafter, Robert Brwme sold the half acre to John Andirsoun, citizen, and Margaret Andro, spouses, and l.l. Witnesses: William Bell, merchant, citizen, Peter Wylie and David Allan, servitors of the said Robert, and Archibald Boyd, servant of the notary. f. 45.

3102. Cadder—Lokart, spouses. 11 March, 1587-8, 9 a.m.

James Wilsoun and Jonet Lindsay, spouses, sold to Gilbert Cadder, maltman, citizen, and Christina Lokhart, spouses, and l.l., an acre of land, lying t.c., in the muir called the Gallomure, between the lands of Ninian Patirsoun, merchant, on the west, the lands of Craigis on the north, and the lands of William Sympsoun on the east. 3126. COCHRANE—MAYNE, SPOUSES. 22 April, 1588, 2 p.m.

James Pettigrew in Pottachen sold to John Cochran, merchant, citizen, and Margaret Mayne, spouses, a fore waste (vasto anteriori), with yard and pertinents, lying t.c., on the east side of the street leading from the metropolitan church to the market cross, between the lands sometime of David Wylie, then of William Wylie, on the north, and the lands of Robert Rowat and of James Flemyng on the south. Sasine given by Robert Rowat, bailie. Witnesses: Thomas Huchesoun, citizen, George Huchesoun, writer (scriba), his son, Archibald Wilsoun, merchant, citizen, and James Andirsoun, serjeant.

Margaret Maxuell, relict of q. James Boyd of Hullirhill, liferenter, and Jonet Boyd, her daughter, heritably vested in the property after mentioned, acknowledged that William Portarfeild of Dwchall had, by payment of 200 merks, lawfully redeemed a great fore tenement, under and above, lying t.c., on the west side of the street leading from the metropolitan church to the market cross, between the lands of Archibald Heygait on the north, and the lands of John Grahame of Hilderstoun on the south.[1] Sasine of the property given by Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie, to Alexander Portarfeild, younger of Dwchall, with consent of [1] John Porterfield of that Ilk acquired this property—the second tenement north of Grammar School Wynd (see protocol No. 2972)—from the chaplain of the chaplainry of the blessed Virgin Mary, in the parish of Houstoun, in the year 1553 (see protocol No. 156). The Porterfields were Renfrewshire lairds, who, in addition to the estate of that name in Renfrew parish, possessed Duchall, in the parish of Kilmacolm, and were long connected with Glasgow. M'Ure, in referring to "four eminent provosts that contributed most to the advantage and beauty of the city," mentions that "the third is George Porterfield, a worthy gentleman of the house of Duchall; he was mainly instrumental in acquiring the barony and regality of Gorbels in favours of the town of Glasgow, to their unspeakable advantage." Porterfield's first term of provostship was in 1645 and his last in 1651. During the period of their residence in Glasgow the family appear to have occupied the mansion erected on the site referred to in the text. Before the end of the 17th century the property had passed to the Hamiltons of Aikenhead, James Hamilton, owner of that estate in 1691, having then made up a title to it as heir of his daughter Anna. Another James Hamilton of Aikenhead sold the property to James Barr, rector of the Grammar School in 1760. Mr. Barr erected on the High Street front a large new tenement which remained till 1867, when it and the back buildings were acquired and afterwards taken down by the Glasgow Improvements Trustees for the formation of the eastern portion of Ingram Street. That street now occupies the site (Purchase, No. 86; Sasine Register, 524, fol. 64). In "Glasgow Past and Present" (1884 edition), iii. pp. 202, 484-5, it is stated that the Porterfield arms were sculptured on the back building (which was numbered 157 High Street), thus apparently showing that at least part of the original mansion remained till the ground was cleared for the new street.

William Portarfeild, his father. Witnesses: William Wallace, son of the bailie, and John Howstoun, servitor of the said William [Portarfeild.] Arch. Hegate. Vol. iii. fol. 62.

3128. Maxuell—Rowat, spouses. 23 April, 1588, 7 a.m.

Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie, gave sasine to Robert Maxuell, as heir of q. William Maxwell, merchant, citizen, his father, of (1) 6 roods of open land (terrarum campestrium), and a barn built on the south side thereof, lying t.e., in the croft called the Langcroft; which 6 roods of land lay between the lands of the chaplainry of St. Christopher on the east, the lands sometime of the Friars Preachers on the west, the common lone on the north, and the lands of John Wedrop and James Rowan on the south; and the barn lay between the barn of John Wedrop on the east and the kiln of James Rowan on the west; and (2) a half acre of land lying in Garngad Hill (monte Garngad); between the lands of Quintin Kay on the [east][1] and the lands of q. Mr. John Hall on the [west.][1] Thereafter, Robert Maxwell, with consent of Marion Wilsoun, his mother, resigned in favour of Margaret Rowat, daughter of Robert Rowat, merchant, citizen, his future spouse, the liferent of (1) a tenement, fore and back, with yard and pertinents, lying t.e., on the north side of the Gallowgait (vie furcarum), between the lands of q. Michael Bard on the west, the lands of Sir Robert Boyd on the east, and the lands of Andrew Baille on the north; (2) a nether booth, part of the great tenement built by q. Mr. James Howstoun, subdean of Glasgw, on the west side of the public street leading from the market cross to the South Nether Port, between the lands of q. Mathew Wilsoun on the north, and the lands of q. David Wilsoun on the south; the booth being the north booth of said great tenement; (3) a back tenement lying on the west t. 63. side of said street, between the lands belonging to the collegiate church of the blessed Virgin Mary and the prebend of St. Ann on the front and east, the tenement built by q. David Lyoun on the west, the tenement of q. John Park on the north, and the tenement of q. David Wilsoun on the south; and (4) the 6 roods of land and barn and the half acre of land above mentioned. Reserving the liferent of Marion Wilsoun, mother of Robert Maxwell, to the tenement, yard, and pertinents in the Gallowgate. Witnesses: David Adame, William Spreull, George Moresoun, merchants, citizens, and Stephen Seller, serjeant.

[1] From the Reformation till the year 1588, when John Cowper was translated from Edinburgh to Glasgow, David Wemys was the only minister in the city. The following extracts from the MS. session records afford interesting information regarding the arrangements consequent on the appointment of a second minister.

28 February, 1587-8. — "Mr. Johne Couper, be the avise of the sessioun of Glasgow, is gladlie and willinglie acceptit and admittit as second minister in Glasgw. Robert Rowat and Andro Baillie ar orderit to pas to the presbiterie of Glasgw, declaring that Mr. John Couper, be the sessioun of Glasgw, is admittit as ane of the ministeris in Glasgw, and willing that the presbiterie admitt him lykewyse, that be baith thair consentis uniformelie materis may proceid."

7 March, 1587-8. — "Upon the overture gevin in to the sessioun be Mr. David Wemes and Mr. John Couper, ministeris, concerning the place and tymes and ordour of teiching, it is thus far statute and concludit be the magistratis and sessioun that, unto better commoditie, first, concerning the place, that upon the Sundaye the place sall be the Hie Kirk, and upon the weik dayis, Weddinisdaye and Frydaye, the College Kirk, unto the tyme the Hie Kirk, or at leist the queir thairof, be sufficientlie repairit for the commodious teiching and heiring of the word. In the Presbytery Records, printed as an appendix to "Collections on the Life of David Weems," published by the Maitland Club, in 1848, the following occurs:—"1 March, 1588.—Mr. John Couper is admitted by the sessioun to be ane of the ministers of the town and parochin of Glasgow, with great affection: the presbytery approve and rejoice: they record an act of assembly ordering his admission." From the same source it is ascertained that Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, who then held the parsonage teinds, agreed to pay therefrom stipends to David Wemes of 500 merks, and to John Couper of 300 merks. Supplementary to his share of the teinds, the magistrates and council, on 2 May, 1590, "for the speciall luif and favour quhilk they haif and beiris to maister Johne Cowper, thair minister, as also for the better sustenyng of him into his charge," granted to him "of thair meir liberalitie" a yearly allowance of 50 merks in money, 4 dozen loads of coal, and £20 for house mail. This arrangement was to continue till the minister was as well provided for in some other way. Previous "actis of giftis" granted by the town council were discharged by the minister, thus showing that the new allowance was a continuance of former contributions.

[2] It appears to have been about this time that feu rights were first given to the Gorbals villagers. During the time the Elphinstones were themselves rentallers, the inhabitants, possessors of small lots, must have possessed under a similar tenure. A list of feuars, made up in or shortly after 1634, contains fifty-four names. The total feu-duties then amounted to £159 9s. 11d. in Scots money, with 72½ hens, convertible into £24 3s. 4d., being 6s. 8d. (half a merk) for each hen. In the title deeds of properties situated in the older parts of Gorbals, hens are still specified as forming part of the feu-duties, and the conversion price is collected on behalf of the city.

Sir George Elphinstoun of Blythiswod, knight, set in feu-farm, and, by his own hands, gave sasine to George Thomesoun, burgess of Glasgow, of a piece of the lands of Gorballis, callep Clwnis Aiker, lying in the barony of Glasgow and shire of Lanerk; which piece of land lay between the piece set in feu-farm to George Bryse on the north, Sir George's other lands of Gorballis on the west, and the public lone on the east; and that for payment of 20 s. and one hen yearly.

3214. BOYD, FUTURE SPOUSE OF SIR GEORGE ELPHINSTOUN. 15 Aug., 1600.[1]

[1] A blank of 3½ pages is left here. Lady Agnes Boyd, the spouse of Sir George, was liferented in the lands of Gorbals, and the blank may have been left for the sasine in her favour. See "The Barony of Gorbals" (Regality Club, vol. iv. p. 18), 3215. Thomesoun—Thomesoun, brothers. 18 August, 1600, 4 p.m. Arch. Hegate Vol. iii. fol. 120.

George Thomesoun and Margaret Harper, spouses, and Walter Thomesoun, brother of George, produced a charter whereby Sir George Elphinstoun of Blythiswod granted to them in feu-farm 35 falls of land (particatis terre vulgo vocatis fallis of land), part of Sir George's lands, called the Gorballis and Brigend, with the pertinents, lying between the lands of William Bryse on the east, the lands occupied by James Fergussoun and Alexander Ardneill on the south, the lands occupied by William Corbit on the west and the water of Clyde or shore (littus) thereof, called the wattir merk thairof, on the north.[1] Sasine given by Mathew Yonng, baker, bailie of Sir f. 121.
George in hac parte. Feu-duty, 40 s., together with two hens yearly, conform to the charter. Witnesses: Donald M'Eller, fisher, citizen of Glasgow, William Bryse, weaver, at Brigend, John Bryse, weaver, there, and John Fergusoun, serjeant.

3216. Edmestoun, junior of Duntreith. 21 August, 1600, 2 p.m.

William Edmestoun, fiar of Duntreith, produced two charters whereby Robert Sterling of Lettir sold to him his £10 land, old extent, of Lettir, with the pertinents, lying within the shire of Sterling and parish of Killerne. In one of the charters the lands were to be held of Robert Sterling, one half in blench and the other half in feu-farm; and in the other charter the lands were to be held of Sir Archibald Sterling of Keir, knight, one £5 land in free blench, and the other £5 land for service of ward and relief.[2] Charters written by Archibald Heygait in Glasgow, and subscribed by the granter and by his spouse, and James Elphinstoun, in token of their consent, and their seals appended, at Niddrie, on 24 August, 1599, in presence of Ninian Blakuod and John Diksoun, servitors of Andrew f. 122.
Edmestoun of that Ilk, Laurence Scot, writer, and Archibald Heygait, writer of the charters. Sasine given on the ground of the lands by Archibald Edmestoun of Ballintone, as bailie in hac parte. Witnesses: Colin Campbell

[2] Before the system was introduced of embodying alternative holdings in one writ, it was customary for a purchaser to obtain two charters in the manner here referred to. As a superior was usually entitled to payment of entry money before receiving a new vassal, delay in applying for confirmation was sometimes expedient; and to obviate insecurity attending an incomplete title, the duplicate charter was resorted to. Till a vassal obtained from the superior confirmation of one of the charters, he held of the seller, as mid-superior, under the other charter. In the transaction, narrated in No. 3216, Edmeston's title was complete so soon as he got sasine, and he held of Robert Sterling as mid-superior. If at a subsequent period he arranged with Sir Archibald Sterling, the over superior, for obtaining his confirmation, the second charter would be available for the purpose.

1 In the year 1567 John Hamilton, subchanter in the cathedral, disposed of his croft and manse to Agnes Colquhoun, and John Hammilton, her natural son, as narrated in protocols 965-7 (see also Reg. Mag. Sig. iv. No. 2035; and Dr. Murray's "Rottenrow," Regality Club, Third Series, p. 49). The croft, which extended to four acres, subsequently came into the possession of Andrew Hay, son of the parson of Renfrew, and he resigned it in favour of Archibald Gibsoun, commissary clerk. The latter got a crown charter of confirmation on 28 May, 1599 (Reg. Mag. Sig. vi. No. 918; Glasg. Charters i., Abstract, p. 42, No. 425).

2 In modern title deeds Bell's Croft is described as lying on the south side of Townmill Road (Sasine Register 515, fol. 121), and this may have been one of the lones referred to. Part of Wishart Street has been formed through the croft. In protocol No. 965, "Bellis Croft" is called "croftam campane" (Bellcroft), but how the name originated has not been ascertained. It and the Subchanter's Croft and Manse, taken together, appear to have extended from the back of the cathedral northward to the Townmill Road at Garogadhill.

1 The street "leading to the Stokwall" is referred to in a charter granted in the year 1285 (Reg. de Passelet, p. 400), and was then called Fishergait (vicus piscatorum). The well, which eventually gave the street its present name, is mentioned in a sasine, dated 1487, in which a tenement is described as lying "in vico Piscatorum juxta le Stok Wel" (Liber Collegii Nostre Domine, etc., p. 256). The original name was thus still retained, but shortly afterwards the new one came into use. In the foundation of a chaplainry in the year 1529-30 an annualrent, forming one of the endowments, is said to be payable furth of property lying "in via Piscatorum sive le Stokwoll" (Munimenta Alme Universitatis i. p. 50). On referring to the protocols printed in the present series, it will be found that, from the year 1530, the ancient name of Fishergait has been superseded by that of Stockwellgait.

2 Towards the end of the year 1588, the town council found that they would require to raise about £600 to enable them to settle with the commendator of Blantyre, "lord fenar of the baronie of Glasgow," for the purchase of a mill on the Kelvin (see Protocol No. 3266), and to meet the extra expenditure occasioned by a visitation of the "pest." It was therefore agreed that part of their common lands should be disposed of "to sik personis, burgessis and indwellaris of Glasgow, as thai can agrie with" (Glasg. Rec. i., p. 121). After an investigation as to what lands might best be spared, the council on 24 December agreed to set in feu several portions, including "the Greneheid betwix the gavill of the lands of Johnne Mudie, passing to the Brigend, reservand ane rowme for ane port passand to the water of Clyd, as salbe stobit, as also ane uther peice of land foiranentis Williame Muris sydwall of his hous to the hie calsay, reservand ane passage betwix the said Williame Muris sydwall of his said hous and the hous that salbe set doune and 3253. Archibald Maxuell and spouse. 6 February, 1588-9, 4 p.m.

Robert Rowatt, bailie, acting, as narrated in No. 3252, gave sasine to Archibald Maxwell, maltman, burgess, dwelling in the city, and Isobella Rolland, his spouse, of two roods of land, lying t.c., on the west side of the Greenhead, between the lands of John Mwdie on the north, the lands set in feu-farm to
f. 19. George Lyoun on the south, the common green on the west, and the common street leading to the Stokwall on the east; they paying 1 s. 8 d. yearly for each rood in name of annualrent feu-farm. Same witnesses as in No. 3252.

3254. John Hammiltoun. 8 February, 1588-9, 8 a.m.

Robert Rowat, bailie, acting as narrated in No. 3252, gave sasine to John Hammiltoun, smith (fabrum ferrarium), citizen, of two roods of land, lying t.c., on the east side of the Greenhead, between the lands set in feu-farm to William Cwnynghame, merchant, on the north, the public street leading to the Stokwall on the south, the bridge on the west, and the common street on the east; but reserving to William Cwnynghame the half of the gable on the north side of the two roods when the same should be built. John Hammiltoun to pay 1 s. 8 d. yearly for each rood in name of annualrent feu-farm. Witnesses: David Hall, merchant, Mathew Watsoun, flesher, James Braidwod, cordiner, citizens, Stephen Sellar and William Stobo, serjeants.

3255. David Gray. 8 February, 1588-9, 8 a.m.

John Hammiltoun, smith, sold to David Gray, maltman, citizen, the two roods of land mentioned in No. 3254. Sasine given by Robert Rowat,
f. 20. bailie. Same witnesses as in No 3254.

3256. John Dobie, citizen, and spouse. 13 March, 1588-9, 1 p.m.

biggit nixt the said Williame Muris hous" (Ib. p. 124). On 2 January the lands were rouped in the tolbooth, when Johnne Hammiltoun, steilbonnetmakar, acquired "twa ruid on the eist syd of the Greneheid, narrest the the calsay," for £23; William Cwnynghame 6 roods for 112 merks; George Esdaill and William Glen, "foure ruidis narrest the brig, on the west syd of the Greneheid," for 180 merks; Mathow Watsoun, Johnne Muir and George Pollok, 2 roods for £50; George Lyoun, 8 roods for 290 merks; and Archibald Maxwell, maltman, 2 roods for £44. In addition to payment of these prices the feuars were to be liable for "twentie pennies ourheid yeirlie of few maill," for each rood (Ib. pp. 125-6). Protocols 3252-4 narrate the granting of feu rights to three of the purchasers.

It will be observed that space was to be reserved "for ane port passand to the water of Clyd." One of the conditions of sale also provided "that the houssis quhilkis salbe biggit betuix the said John Mwdies hous and the Brigend" were not to "haif frie ysche nor entrie on the baksydis but onlie lichtis and windois." (Glasg. Rec. i. p. 125), The port referred to appears to have been that known as the Water Port.

and Isobella Scott, sponses, on the other part, resigned in favour of John Dobie and spouse, and l.l., a house and piece of yard, lying t.c., in the Stabill Grene, between the lands of John Dobie on the east and west, the common street on the south, and the common lone on the north. [1] In a charter dated 27 January, 1507-8, it is stated that Archbishop Blacader had caused to be constructed and repaired, at his costs and charges, a fulling mill on his lands and water of Kelvin, the ferm of which, being 6 merks annually, was to be paid to himself and his successors (Reg. Episc Glasg., No. 486; Glasg. Chart. i. Abstract p. 89, No. 586). The mill is thus referred to in the archbishop's rental book in 1517: "Donald Lyon rentallit in the new walkmyll off Partik in the new towne" (Diocesan Reg. i. p. 75). In 1554 Archbishop Betoun received Archibald Lyon, son of Donald, as rentaller, and gave him power to change the waulk mill into a wheat mill, he being bound to grind all the wheat which the bishop consumed in his house, and to pay four merks yearly (Glasg. Chart. i. Abstract p. 18, No. 324). In 1577-8 the town council purchased the rental right from Archibald Lyon (Ib. ii. p. 446, No. 74), and were received as rentallers by Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, shortly after he obtained the lordship of Glasgow in 1587 (Ib. p. 452, No. 97). The commendator was authorised to grant feu rights to the rentallers, and following on negotiations alluded to in the printed records (i. pp. 120-1), the feu charter referred to in the text was granted. "Archibald Lyounes Milne," sometimes called Clayslaps Mill, was sold to the Incorporation of Bakers in 1771, but was reacquired by the town council in 1874, and the site is now included in the Kelvingrove Park.

3271. John Robesoun and Helen Mayn, spouses. 4 April, 1589, 10 a.m.

James Mayn, merchant, citizen, and Margaret Cochrane, spouses, for implement of their part of a contract between them on the one part, and John Robesoun, merchant, burgess, and Helen Mayn, spouses, on the other part, resigned in favour of John Robesoun and spouse, and l.l., a nether fore merchant booth, sometime occupied by q. John Woddrope and then by the said John Robesoun; part of a tenement, lying t.c., on the east side of the street leading from the market cross to the Nether Port, between the lands or tenements of q. Robert Forsyd, citizen, on the east, the lands or tenements of Robert Smyth, citizen, on the south, and the public street leading from the said cross to the East Port, commonly called the Gallowgait, on the north. Sasine given by James Flemyng, bailie. Property to be redeemable for 400 merks Scots. Witnesses: Alexander Baillie, James Blakburne, merchants, citizens, James Andersoun, John Pawtoun, serjeants, and David Robesoun, notary public. f. 31.

3272. Jonet Herbertsoun and Jonet Gibsoun. 1 May, 1589, 4 p.m.

James Stewart, merchant, burgess, with consent of James Gibsoun, son and heir of q. John Gibsoun, for implement of part of a contract between James Gibsoun on the one part, and Jonet Herbertsoun, relict of q. John Gibsoun, on the other part, resigned in favour of Jonet Herbertsoun, in liferent, an annualrent of 20 merks, and of Jonet Gibsoun, her daughter, heritably an annualrent of 10 merks, part of the said annualrent of 20 merks, which annualrent of 20 merks was payable furth of a tenement of land, fore and back, with yard and pertinents, sometime belonging to q. John Gibsoun, then to Henry Wilsoun, lying between the lands of q. George Herbertsoun on the north, and the lands of Thomas Myln and q. Andrew Dunlope on the south. 3274. EDUARD POLLOK AND SPOUSE. 2 May, 1589, 3 p.m.

Thomas Nasmyth, bonnetmaker, burgess, and Marion Thomsoun, spouses, for implement of a contract, resigned in favour of Eduard Pollok, skinner, burgess, and Beatrix Morsoune, spouses, and l.l., the annualrent of 20 s. mentioned in No. 3273. Sasine given by the same bailie and before the
f. 33. same witnesses as in No. 3273.

3275. ROBERT CHIRNESYD AND SPOUSE. 2 May, 1589, 5 p.m.

Robert Chirnesyd, citizen, produced a charter of feu-farm whereby the provost, bailies, councillors, and community of the burgh of Glasgow granted to him and Marion Scott, his spouse, and l.l., a piece of common land where the wall next (juxta) the West Port stood, with the wall and stones thereof, containing 3 roods in length and 24 feet in breadth, in the middle of which the said wall stood, as marked by wood and stobs; with power and liberty to Robert Chirnesyd and spouse, and their heirs, to erect houses and buildings upon the said piece of land, and upon the port thereon, of such breadth and height as they might deem expedient, conform to the tenor of a statute and act made thereupon; with the several pertinents, and free ingress and egress; lying between the lands of Allan Park on the north, the lands of William Robesoun, merchant, on the south, the passage to the church of St. Quintigern[1] on the west, and the common street leading to the market cross on the east; within the barony and regality of Glasgw, territory of the said burgh and city and shire of Lanerk.[2] Charter subscribed and sealed at Glasgow, on 2 May, 1589, in presence of James Andersoun, Stephen Sellar, John Pawtoun, and Andrew Fairy, serjeants, and David Robesoun, writer. Sasine given by James Flemyng, bailie. Witnesses: Robert Rowat, bailie, John Heislat, dyer, citizen, David Robesoun, notary, Andrew Ros, writer, Stephen Sellar, James Andersoun, and Andrew Fairy, serjeants. John Ros. Fol. 33.

3276. Thomas Myln, chyrurgeon, and spouse. 3 May, 1589, 11 a.m. f. 34.

Thomas Myln, chirurgeon, citizen, and Elizabeth Robertsoun, spouses, produced a charter of feu-farm whereby the provost, bailies, councillors, and community of Glasgow granted to them, and l.l., (1) a piece of the common lands called the Mylndameheid, extending to 2 acres and 1 rood, or thereby, as bounded by piles fixed in the ground, lying between the lands called

[1] St. Tenu seems to have been meant. See next footnote.

[2] Among the common lands which the town council on 24 December, 1588, agreed to dispose of for the raising of money as mentioned in the footnote to protocol No. 3252, there were included "the haill wall of the Westport, on baith the sydis of the samyn, and swamekle thairof in breid and lenth as salbe stobit . . . and the stanis of the said West poirt to be ropit with the ground thairof" (Glasg. Rec. i. pp. 124-5). Four days afterwards it was resolved, subject to the provost's approval, that the Westport should be removed from the head of the Old Wynd to the head of Stockwellgait (Ib. p. 125). This alteration seems to have been effected, and Robert Chirneside of Possil, who had married the widow of George Elphinstone of Blythswood, acquired the site. On 14 March, 1588-9, the bailies and council met "for taking ordour with the mesuring and stobing of the rudis of the West Porte, sett furth in few be thame to Robert Chirneside"; and having passed to the ground with the liners, there was marked off an area of 3 roods (i.e. 18 ells = 55 feet 6 inches) in length and 24 feet in breadth. One half of the 24 feet of breadth was to be within the port and the other half without the port, on the other side; "and the said port itselfe, and entres thairof, to be putt and placit in sik place as the provest, baillies, and counsall sall appoint, with powar to the said Robert Chirnesyd to big als heich and braid abone the said port as he sall think expedient," but not "to big ony laiche windois within his saidis rudis quhill he be jeist heicht, except sum slitt windois of halfe futt wyde," and these narrow openings were to be "stenschorit." (Ib. p. 131).

The charter narrated in the text is still preserved. At the time it was written a generation was rising up possessed of little personal knowledge regarding the chapels and churches vacated at the Reformation. Even the name of St. Tenen's church (which, as shown by protocol No. 2462, had been converted into a barn) seems to have been forgotten. A blank was left for the east and west boundaries, and when it was filled up "St. Quintigern," instead of "St. Tenu," was erroneously inserted. The error has been repeated in the protocol where a blank had also been left. In addition to the price paid in cash, the feu-charter stipulated for payment of an annual feu-duty of 5s. There were some disputes between Chirnsyd and the town regarding the extent of ground sold to him, but in the year 1613 the town reacquired the whole property from his nephew (Inventory of City Writs i. b. 21). See Appendix (infra No. 3313).

The West Port and its adjuncts, spanning the Trongate opposite the north-west corner of Stockwell Street, remained till the year 1751, when the structure was removed.

[1] These lands were likewise included among those appointed to be disposed of for clearing off the town's liabilities. On 2 January, 1588-9, it was reported that there had been "biddin be Thomas Myln, chirurgen, for the Mylnedameheid, Peithog, and Dassiegrene, the soume of ellevin hundreth markis" (Glasg. Rec. i. p. 126), and there was also payable a yearly feu-duty of 6s. 8d. for each acre (Ib. p. 125). The statute referred to in the text was passed by the town council on 19 April, 1589, when they met "for taking ordour with the passage of ane car gait to the Provestis Hauch, and utheris nychtbouris landis about, throuch the landis of Peithog and Dassiegrene, laitlie set furth in few to Thomas Mylne, chirurgane." It was agreed that the passage should be "on all pairtis the braid of sex futtis, and that throuch the same ane horss chairgit with ane car full of corne or ony uther kind of stufe may easilie repair thairthrow" (Ib. pp. 132-3). Possibly some disputes arose out of these negotiations, as about a month after the date of the protocol Milne was punished for speaking slanderously of the "hungrie toun of Glasgw," and calling the bailies "treasonable dissevaris." See farther as to Milne in footnote to No. 2881.

Peathog, Dassiegreen, and Milldamhead were re-acquired by the town council in 1664 and subsequent years, and now form part of Glasgow Green.

3279. Robert Raltoun and spouse. 13 May, 1589, 10 a.m.

Marion Scott, relict of q. George Elphinstoun, and then sponse of Robert Chirnesyd, citizen, with his consent, acknowledged that Robert Raltoun, maltman, citizen, and Marion Neilsoun, spouses, had, by payment of 100 merks, lawfully redeemed a nether tenement, lying t.c., on the west side of the street leading from the Quadrivium to the market cross, between the lands of q. Thomas Stevinsoun on the south, the lands of Mathew Cameroun on the north, and the lands of Cuthbert Herbertsoun on the west. Sasine of the property given by James Flemyng, bailie, to Robert Raltoun and spouse. Witnesses: James and William Neilsoun, maltmen, and John Pawtoun, serjeant.

3280. David Donald and spouse. 14 May, 1589, 6 p.m.

David Donald, merchant, citizen, and Catherine Biggert, spouses, produced a charter of feu-farm whereby the provost, bailies, councillors, and community of Glasgow granted to them, and l.l., a piece of the common lands, called the cruikis of the Mylndame, with the pertinents (but reserving the passage of one car gait through the same), lying between the lands of Mylndamehead then set in feu-farm to Thomas Myln, chirurgeon, on the east, the lands of Kinclaith on the south, the lands of (blank) on the west, and the lands of Mylnhill and Craignestok on the north; within the barony and regality f. 36.

[1] On 25 January, 1588-9, the town council resolved "that the cruikis of the Mylnedame be ropit and sauld"; and David Donald appears to have been the purchaser. The milldam crooks were reacquired by the town in 1665 and 1684, and are now included in the Green.

It had been the practice for the inhabitants to assemble yearly at the Milldam and there hold the Whitsunday court for perambulation of the marches and transaction of other public business. Now that the lands were sold, another meeting place required to be selected. Accordingly on 4 June, 1590, the town council resolved that "upoun Witsontwyisday yeirlie in tyme cumyng, becaus the Mylndame is sett in few, whilk wes the place of thair conventioun for roiping of thair commoun gudis and uther thingis, that efter the outputting of the outlandimeris in the morning and ryding about the marches, they sall all convene betuix the buttis of the Grene and thair rope all things that suld and aucht to be ropit yeirlie, in presence of the haill commounaltie." After the rouping was over the provost, bailies, and council were to "pas to the tolbuith, and thair, in thair counsallhous, chuse and elect sik honest men as thesaurer, clerk, maister of werk, and menstrallis, as they wer wont to chuse at the Mylndame in tyme bypast" (Glasg. Rec. i. p. 152).

The "Grene" at that time consisted of the open ground situated north of the Clyde and between St. Enoch's or Glasgow burn and the Molendinar.

3295. Graye and Hammiltone. [1586-7] 1 p.m. Geo. Huchesone. Fol. 3.

[A protocol, the first part of which is wanting.[3] The preserved portion begins with the closing words of the precept of sasine contained in a charter subscribed and sealed at Edinburgh, 27 January, 1586-7, in presence of James Cochrane of Braidschaw, Mr. James Cokburne, brother of "the said"

1 Written "occidentem."

2 For some unknown reason the protocols of John Ros here terminate, the remainder of his book being left blank. Ros was re-elected town clerk for a year on 26 May, 1589, and again for the same period on 9 June, 1590. On account of the council records being wanting from 31 July, 1590, till 5 October, 1594, there is no record of any election within that period, but it is supposed that Henry Gibson, a former town clerk, had been re-appointed on terms which did not require a yearly renewal. He is designated town clerk (clericus civitatis Glasguensis) in an instrument of sasine dated 18 December, 1591 (Inv. i. b. 12, No. 14; Glasg. Charters ii. p. 454, No. 103); and in the council record, on 1 June, 1596, when the annual election of other officers is noted, there is the following entry: "Clerk:—Mr. Henry Gibsoune standis conforme to his gift." He appears to have continued in the clerkship till about the year 1604, but of his protocols between 10 August, 1576 (up to which date abstracts have already been printed), and 28 April, 1598, only one leaf has been preserved (see Nos. 2598 to 2601). There is thus a period of nearly nine years during which the record of transactions in Glasgow properties is interrupted. It happens, however, that there is a protocol book (1587-1605) written by George Huchesone, one of the founders of Huchesones' Hospital. As is well known, George Huchesone practised as a writer and notary public in Glasgow, and though, so far as is ascertained, he did not at any time act as town clerk, most of his protocols have a local bearing, and may appropriately be included in the present series. Abstracts of these down to the end of the year 1600 will accordingly be given.

3 From the paging it is shown that the first two leaves are lost.

John [Cokburne] of Clarkingtoun, James Johnestoun, notary public, and Mr. John Robertsone, servitor of "the said Mr. Thomas."] After the reading of the precept, William . . . as bailie in hac parte gave sasine to Andrew . . . as attorney and in name of Mr. Thomas [Graye] and Grissal Hammiltoune, his spouse, of an annualrent and feu-farm of 20 merks money, two bolls of oats and 12 capons yearly, furth of "the said" eight oxgangs of land, with houses, buildings, yards, and sundry pertinents. Witnesses: Patrick Johnestoun, Alexander Johnestoun, James Young, dwelling in Strabrock, and William Hammiltoun, son of "the said" q. Mr. James Hammiltoun, there. On the same day, this sasine was intimated to Helen Conynghame and William Mowbray, tenants of the lands.

3296. MR. WILLIAM SCOTT. 8 July, 1587, A.R. 20, 5 p.m.

Alexander Hepburne of Quhitsum, knight, and Jane Conynghame, his spouse, in implement of a contract, gave sasine, by their own hands, to Mr. William Scott, writer, of the lands of Rickartoun, with manor, houses, buildings, orchards, yards, greens, parts, pendicles and pertinents thereof, lying in the barony of Rathow and shire of Renfrew (but, nevertheless, within the bounds of the shire of Edinburgh). Done on the ground of the lands of Rickartoun, in the yard of the manor thereof. Witnesses: John Andersone, messenger, Robert Wardlaw, servitor of Alexander Hepburne, and James Scott, writer, servitor of Adam Lawtie, writer.

3297. LUDOVIC, DUKE OF LENNOX. 14 October, 1587, A.R. 21, 3 p.m.

Robert Houstoun in Rasschelie, attorney and in name of a noble and
f. 4. potent lord Ludovic Stewart, lord Aubigny, etc., produced a precept granted by King James VI., and addressed to Mathew Stewart of Barscuib, his sheriff of Dumbartane in hac parte, in which precept it is narrated that the King, was nearest heir of his dearest grandfather, Mathew earl of Lennox, lord Dernelie, for a time regent of the realm and lieges, and thus had the sole right of succession to the family of Lennox, which was of noble and ancient fame and memory; that the King's predecessors of that family were very often employed in arduous services to the crown and commonwealth of the realm in the office of lieutenant in time of wars, and in other notable services worthy of memory; and the King, willing that the name of the said house should in future be continued, for the honour and advantage of the kinsmen descending from that family, and the protection and defence of the said kinsmen and their dependents, took occasion in his minority not only to dispone the profit of the said house of Lennox to his dearest cousin and trusty councillor, Esme, duke of Lennox, Erle Dernelie, Lord Torboltoun and Aubigny, etc., great chamberlain of the Kingdom, who, for the singular favour which he bore towards the King, came from France, honourably accompanied, on his great costs and at peril of his life, to ascertain the King's welfare, and to tender service on his person in his minority, and so remained till his death, well meriting a great reward, but the King also erected the house of Lennox into a free dukedom; which infeftment, after the death of the said lord duke, fell under the King's revocation, and though the King had succeeded to the crown, he was anxious not to diminish the honour and advantage of the said house of Lennox, but rather to provide the same to the nearest male descendant thereof; and that the King's dearest cousin, Ludovic Stewart, lord Aubigny, etc., is eldest son of the late duke, and, after the King, the nearest heir male by descent of the said house: Therefore, the King, after attaining the complete age of twenty-one years, gave and granted to the said Ludovic Stewart, lord Aubigny, etc., and his heirs male,[1] the whole lands, earldom, and lordship of Lennox, with castles, towers, fortalices, manors, yards, orchards, woods, mills, salmon fishings in the waters of Leven and Garloichheid, free forests, outsettis, parts, pendicles, annexees, connexes, tenants, tenandries, services of free tenants, advocations, and the patronage

[1] The original of the precept, in its preliminary narrative, is in these terms:—"Jacobus, Dei gratia Rex Scotorum . . . 3298. Walter, commendator of Blantyre. 13 November, 1587, 2 p.m.

Walter, commendator of Blantyre, produced a precept by King James VI., in which it is narrated that after his perfect age of twenty-one years, declared in a parliament held at Edinburgh, on [8] July, 1587, the whole temporal lands, offices, and regalities of all prelacies and benefices, small and great, within the kingdom, were annexed to the King and the patrimony of his crown; and after the King's general revocation, dissolution was made in the said parliament for the setting in feu-farm of the said temporal lands, offices, and regalities.[1] Therefore the King, for the good, true, and thankful service rendered to him by his faithful cousin and councillor, Walter, commendator of Blantyre[2] (with consent of his councillors, Sir John f. 7. Maitland of Thirlestane, knight, chancellor, Mr. Thomas Lyoun of Baldowky, the master of Glammes, treasurer, Sir Ludovic Bellenden of Auchnowll, knight, clerk of justiciary, and Mr. Robert Dowglas, provost of Lynclowden, collector general), granted to the said commendator, his heirs and assignees, in feu-farm, the whole lands, lordships, burghs, baronies, regalities, towns, offices, and others, respectively aftermentioned, viz., the lands and barony of Glasgow, the city and burgh of regality of Glasgow, with all the bounds, lands, tenements, houses, yards, butts (caudis), kilns, barns, and other buildings within the bounds of the said burgh, tenants, tenandries, and services of free tenants, with feu-ferms, burgh maills, and other duties whatsoever, with all rights, claim of right, title, customs, duties, and all other privileges belonging to the archbishop of Glasgow in times past, and all and sundry other lands of the barony of Glasgow, and particularly the town and lands of Mekle Govane, Westscheill, Govanescheillis, Haggis, Litle Govane, Brigend, Gorballis, Borrofeild, Nicolas, Lyninghauch, Gerssumland, Litle Kowcaldanes, Brumehill, Rammishorne, Dalmernok, Mekle Kowcaldanes, Stobcors, Uver Newtoun, Nedder Newtoun, Westsyde of Partik, Eistsyde of Partik, Hyndland, Kirklie, Mill of Partik, the mill lands thereof, Balscheagrie Gartnavell, Balgray, Wodsyde, Garroche, Garbraid, Ruchill, Keppoich, Possillis

[1] The act of Parliament annexing the temporalities of benefices to the crown was passed on 29 July, 1587 (1587, c. 8, Acts of Parl. iii. p. 431; Glasg. Chart. ii. p. 192).

[2] Walter Stewart was the second son of Sir John Stewart of Minto, who was provost of Glasgow between 1565 and 1573. His elder brother, Sir Mathew Stewart, was provost in 1581-3, and 1588-1600. Walter Stewart had been a companion of King James in his boyhood, had received the priory of Blantyre in commendam in 1580, was appointed lord privy seal in 1582, and was created a peer of Scotland, under the title of Lord Blantyre, in 1606.

Also the lands and barony of Ancrum, the dominical lands and mill of Anerum; the lands and barony of Askirk; and the lands and barony of Lillisleif; with, in each case, castles, towers, and others, as in the other cases above mentioned; all lying within the shire of Roxburgh. Also the lands of Bischoppis Forrest, the lands of Nyddrie Foster, the lands called the half penny land in Carrik, the church lands of Cambusnathame; and all other lands of old belonging to the archbishopric of Glasgow, wherever they lie within the kingdom of Scotland (excepting the lands and baronies of Stobo and Eddlestoun, with the bailiaries thereof, formerly disponed to the chancellor; and the lands and barony of Carstairs, with bailiary thereof, formerly disponed to Sir William Stewart, son of Sir Andrew Stewart of Uchiltrie); and also with the advocations, donations and patronage rights of all benefices, great and small, of old at the disposal of the archbishops of Glasgow; with the offices of bailiary and justiciary of the whole regality of the said archbishopric, as well property as tenandry thereof[1] (excepting the bailieries of the lands and
f. 8. baronies above excepted). The commendator was to be allowed £200 yearly as a fee for exercising the office of bailiary and justiciary.[2] The whole lands and others were erected and incorporated into a free lordship and regality, to be called the lordship of Glasgow, and the castle of Glasgow

[1] The charter to the commendator is printed in Glasgow Charters, pt. ii. pp. 215-27, and fuller details will be found there as to the jurisdiction and other powers to be exercised within the regality. The possessors of the Archbishopric subsequent to James Betoun, who held it at the Reformation and for some years afterwards, were Mr. John Porterfield, 1571-2; archbishop James Boyd, 1573-81; archbishop Robert Montgomery, 1581-5; and William Erskine (a layman), 1585-7.

[2] The charter bears that the commendator had to pay to the crown a feu-duty of £500 yearly.

was to be the principal messuage thereof. One sasine taken at the castle was to be sufficient for the whole lands, though they lay in several shires. Power was likewise given to the commendator to set the lands in feu-farm to the old rentallers. The charter was given under the great seal at Halyruidhous, on 3 November, 1587. After the reading of the precept, Sir Mathew Steward of Mynto, knight, sheriff of Lanerk in hac parte, appointed by the precept, gave sasine to the commendator; and this was done at the castle of Glasgow, and in the close (clausura) thereof. Witnesses: David Forsyith of Dyikis, Gabriel Corbet of Hardgraif, Robert Steward, Mr. Adam Wallace, Robert Rowatt, bailie, John Grhame, Gavin Grhame, William Steward, Malcolm Steward, Thomas Clogy, Peter Patersone, citizens, Thomas Huchesone in Lambhill, Mathew Fischar, keeper of the said castle, Mr. Henry Gibsone and Archibald Eglyntoun, notaries and co-notaries, with the notary subscribing.

3309. ARCHIBALD RODGER, CITIZEN. 26 May, 1591, 5 p.m.

Archibald Eglyngtoun, notary, acknowledged that Archibald Rodger, citizen, had, by payment of 100 merks, lawfully redeemed a tenement, fore and back, with yard, close and pertinents, lying t.c., in the street leading from the market cross to the South Port, lie Barreszett, on the west side of the said street, commonly called the Saltmarkett,[1] between the lands and tenement of David Hall on the south, the lands and tenement of the said Archibald Rodger on the north, the lands of (blank) on the west, and the public street on the east. Sasine of the property given by John

[1] It is supposed that at one time a wauk or fulling mill existed near the foot of this street, getting its water power from the mill-dam so often referred to in the protocols; and the road from the market cross to the mill apparently got its name on account of its being frequented by members of the fuller craft. In a sasine dated 7 June, 1422, a tenement is described as lying "in Vico Fullonum"; another sasine, dated 1447, refers to a piece of land lying in "le Walcargat"; and an indenture, wholly written in the vernacular, and dated 18 December, 1454, describes a tenement as lying in "the Kyngis streyt, the quhylk is callit the Walcargat" (Liber Collegii Nostre Domine, etc., pp. 168, 177, 242). So far as is known, the mill itself is not referred to in any extant record. As already mentioned in footnote to No. 3266, Archbishop Blacader caused a waulk mill to be erected on the water of Kelvin about the year 1507-8, and it is probable that from at least that time the mill at the "Walcargat" would fall into disuse. In the protocols, the old designation "Vicus Fullonum" was frequently repeated, though a more common way of designating the thoroughfare was to describe it as the street leading from the market cross to the south port. Among the inhabitants a briefer colloquial description must have been in use, and when "Walcargait" lost its former significance, the fact that a market for salt was held in the street suggested a ready substitute. For the convenience of fishermen and others who required large quantities of salt, it was desirable that the market should be near the river, and the records indicate that the Walkergait was the place fixed upon. After the Reformation, when the clergy were leaving their manses, and the townhead was being deserted, an attempt was made to arrest decay by transferring two of the market places to that district. The salt market was, about the year 1587, appointed to be held above the Wyndhead, but the change was not successful, and the dealers returned to the former site. In the words of an act of parliament, passed in 1594, the Wyndhead "was altogider incommodious, be reasoue the same wes far distant fra the brig and watter of the said citie, quhair the salt is maist usit, and pat the merchandis and fischeris quha bocht the same to greit expenses of cariage and transporting thairof fra the said wynd heid to the brig, be the space of ane myle and mair; lyk as the sellaris of the salt, upoun that occasioun, removit thame selffis to the auld place narrer the said brig quhair the same wes sauld of befoir" (Glasg. Chart ii. pp. 214, 244). Though the vernacular designation has not occurred in former protocols—in these formal documents, variation in description was purposely avoided so as to preserve evidence of identity—it is probable, for the reason already indicated, that for a long time previous to 1591, the street had been "commonly called the Saltmarkett."
